CITY PARK

Engagement Pathway

City Park Engagement Pathway

SERVING: ALL OF NEW ORLEANS

The framework for public engagement and planning over the next year will be iterative and built on community feedback, research, and design work completed to date. The collaborative work to date has revealed two layers of planning that structure the City Park Master Plan design process: Foundational Planning & Place-Making Planning. The following months of engagement and planning intends to build on these two layers, grounded in a process-based metaphor that all New Orleans residents know and love — Making Gumbo:

Ingredients

- Citywide Community Engagement Meeting
- Youth Committee Advisory Meeting
- Pop-Up Engagement Events Across New Orleans

Directions

- Complete three Community Engagement Meetings to gather input for the City Park Plan. (9/27/23 , 12/6/23 , 3/21/24)
● ● ●
- MAKING GROCERIES
Continue to bring unheard voices (including youth and marginalized communities) up to speed, inviting them to review and add to the input already received - the "list of ingredients and seasoning" that will inform the City Park Master Plan.
● ●
- STIRRING THE ROUX
Together, using previous community input, review and confirm the base created from shared intentions that will hold the City Park planning process together. This is Foundational Planning (12/11/24)
● ● ●
- PREPPING THE INGREDIENTS
With the base made, imagine ways to preserve and enhance spaces that people are passionate about, identifying potential opportunities that will diversify visitor experiences. This is Place-Making Planning (1/29/25)
● ● ●
- MIXING THE GUMBO
Add the ingredients in, while bringing Foundational & Place-Making Planning concepts together to visualize how new opportunities can be realized within the City Park Master Plan (4/9/25)
● ●
- TASTE-TESTING THE GUMBO
Review the proposed City Park Plan to confirm it represents everyone's interests and ensures the best outcome for City Park's future. Further feedback will be incorporated in the following phases of design. (6/25/25)
